Icons of Love

Each year people all over the world celebrate Valentine's Day, so let's talk about love mythologies!

Valentine's Day is celebrated every year on February 14th. This celebration of love is always interesting. Love has been a subject that has interested many people and cultures throughout time. Many mythologies around the world have a love god or goddess that people believed brought love into the world.

Aphrodite

One of the most famous love goddesses was Aphrodite. In ancient Greek mythology, Aphrodite was known as the goddess of both love and beauty. There are many different stories about how she was created. Some stories say that she was the child of Zeus, the King of the Gods, and Dione. Other stories say that she was born from the foam of the sea. She had a son named Eros, who also became a love god.

Venus

The Ancient Romans also had their Aphrodite. They called her Venus. She was the daughter of Jupiter, and had a son named Cupid, who is very much like Eros. The Romans believed she was very beautiful, and had the power of making people fall in love.

Yue Lao

Yue Lao is the famous Chinese god of love and marriage. He is known as the "old man under the moon." The story of Yue Lao goes back to the year 618. The myth tells the story of a man named Wei Gu, who couldn't find a wife. One night, he saw an old man, Yue Lao, reading a book. The old man told him that it was his job to bring couples together. Wei Gu wanted to know who his future wife would be. When a little girl walked by, Yu Lao told him that she would be his wife, but Wei Gu did not believe him. A few years later, Wei Gu married her.

Hathor

The ancient Egyptians also had some ideas about love. The name of their love goddess is Hathor. She was really more than that; she was also the goddess of joy, motherhood, and music. Her symbol was a cow and you can see this symbol on many temples in Egypt that were built for her.

We don't have to believe in those stories to enjoy them. Still, one thing is for sure – people have always and will always believe in love.
